Started in May 2023, the project is implemented in four countries: Bulgaria, Croatia, Romania, and Greece with the aim to:

- prevent, combat, and respond to peer violence among children in schools by transforming social and gender norms and behaviours.
- train teachers to become better prepared to deal with violence within school contexts and learn skills related to prevention of violence and gender-based violence
- create space for children to challenge social and gender norms that lead to peer violence and to become change makers able to develop sustainable solutions that address violence.

The project will engage eight schools in each four countries (32 schools in total) and train a total of 64 facilitators (16 per country) from the targeted schools based on the tailored curriculum, who will end up training their colleagues in the schools they come from. The trainer of trainers will be responsible for building the capacity of the facilitators who will in turn conduct participatory activities with children and young people and other schoolteachers and professionals to prevent, combat and respond to peer-to-peer violence in and around schools and other educational settings (like afterschool) as well as to empower children to address the problem through their own solutions.

- The 2 selected trainers will have their input taken into consideration for the readjustment of the methodologies.
- The 2 selected trainers will support the facilitators, as needed, to organize their peer-to-peer meetings in schools. It is not necessary to be present at these events, but it is necessary to help the facilitators in case they need support with understanding the methodology or picking out issues and identifying solutions in order to discuss with their colleagues, particularly over email.
- The 2 selected trainers will support the facilitators and Youth Leaders in organizing child-led initiatives, 1 per each school. Once again, the physical presence of the trainers will not be necessary for this activity, but their support punctually responding to questions and offering guidance will be necessary for the facilitators and Youth Leaders in the schools, particularly over email.
